Chinese, it is most common to gloss the name as "Peace on the Liao", or the "Forever-Peaceful Liao". Liaoning was one of the first provinces in China to industrialize. In recent years, this early focus on heavy industry has become a liability, as many of the large state-run enterprises have experienced economic difficulties. Recognizing the special difficulties faced by Liaoning and other provinces in northeast China because of their heritage of heavy industry, the Chinese central government recently launched a "Revitalize the North-east" Campaign.

Haicheng TALC is the synonym for one of the highest quality industrial mineral in China and the world.

Hai Cheng Jing Hua Mineral Products Co., Ltd is an established producer of a wide range of Industrial Minerals, as well as wood-plastic-composites (WPC). Driven by intensive research and product development, the company is able to compete successfully on local and international markets. The company has been engaging Dr. Schober for several years already as their senior expert. He also supported their sales of Talc products to international markets, to multinational customers in the plastics field.

Liaoning is the southernmost part of Manchuria, the Chinese northeast. It is also known in Chinese as "the Golden Triangle" from its shape and strategic location. The province is named after Liao River, which flows through the territory. In both English and
